

THE OHIO STATE UNIVERSITY COLLEGE OF MEDICINE

Learn how The Ohio State University College of Medicine is participating in the 2018 AAMC Annual Meeting

November 2-6, 2018 | American Association of Medical Colleges Annual Meeting | Austin, Texas

Each year, the AAMC annual meeting brings together members of the medical education community from across the nation to share knowledge, enabling connections, delivering thought-provoking change, and providing leadership that aims to transform health care.

Among the presenters from the Ohio State University College of Medicine this year are college Dean K. Craig Kent, MD; Associate Dean for Admissions Quinn Capers IV, MD; and OSUWMC Diversity Officer Leon McDougle, MD. (Details below.)

The AAMC Learn Serve Lead 2018 meeting will offer more than 130 concurrent sessions, 80 networking opportunities, nine Voices of Medicine and Society speakers, and four plenary sessions addressing such topical issues as unconscious bias, harassment, health equity and social justice, physician and learner wellness, among others.

In addition to the many opportunities to learn about today's challenges to healthcare educators and leaders, participants may attend career fairs and networking events, focused lunch discussions, wellness sessions, award dinners, poster displays and more.
