Benefiting

Last year, in a response to a challenge from Dr. Willa Hsueh, the Director of the Diabetes and Metabolism Research Center (DMRC) at Ohio State University's Wexner Medical Center, to do more than write a check we both raised awareness and got a lot of people to write checks – about $25,000 worth – to support research at OSU's DMRC. We played golf, ate healthy, tasty food for lunch and dinner, and heard from a longtime former mayor of Columbus about his personal trials and tribulations with the disease and how he saw it affect the citizens of Columbus.

That has brought us here to the 2nd Annual Islet Cell Invitational at The Columbus Country Club. Our goal is to raise more money for The OSU Wexner Medical Center's DMRC and to ultimately fund the resources needed to continue to bring human trials here to OSU for efforts already underway to test a functional cure for type-1 diabetes.

The Ohio State University Wexner Medical Center treats thousands of patients with diabetes and has one of the largest patient populations of individuals with type-1 diabetes. OSU has a number of exceptional programs specifically for type-1 diabetes including an adolescent to adult transition program and a diabetes technology clinic. OSU is uniquely positioned to be at the forefront of cutting edge technology to functionally cure type-1 diabetes and prevent the complications of this insidious disease.

This year we hope that the support of our sponsors will allow us to get to our goal and beyond. Your support means a great deal to us and we hope you can join us in support of Dr. Hsueh and her colleagues as they work to find a workable cure for this terrible disease.
